

BAM Winter Policy Note

November 2018

I continue to work with the Executive, our Fellows, and the SIGs to respond to parliamentary inquiries and government consultations of importance to the business & management community. As Parliament and Whitehall await the outcome of the current round of Brexit negotiations, we now find ourselves amidst of a quieter period than normal for such activity. I encourage you, however, to look through the October Policy Monitor to see if there are any inquiries in your area of expertise (available at: <https://www.bam.ac.uk/policy>).

Members of the BAM and CABS executives continue to meeting with policy makers and members of government, as part of our joint campaign for greater investment in business and management research. For more information on this project, and downloads of the accompanying infographic and report, see: <https://charteredabs.org/research-impact/>.

We also continue to provide links to important information for our members through our twitter account (@bam_ac_uk), such as the Campaign for Social Science's new report (A World of Talent) that examines international academic staff and the implications for a Post-Brexit migration regime, and which includes a detailed analysis of business and management studies by region (on pages 14 & 15).

I also encourage you to visit the policy page on the BAM website for further information and resources:

<https://www.bam.ac.uk/policy>. Previous submissions made by BAM and its Fellows may be found there, as well as information on new opportunities to give evidence and to obtain funding, and resources like a one-page guide of best practice for submitting written evidence to Parliament.
